

How can parents support children's rights?

Parents can support children's rights in lots of different ways. Here are some ideas:

Listen to your child's opinions and take them seriously.

Help your child to learn about their rights and what they can do to make sure they are respected.

Support organizations that work to protect children's rights.

Speak out against things that are unfair or harmful to children.

Conclusion:

In conclusion, as members of the Springfield School Rights Respecting School Steering Group, we hope that this information has helped you to understand a little more about children's rights and the UNCRC. As children, we believe that every child deserves to be treated with respect and dignity, and we hope that you will join us in working towards a world where all children's rights are respected and protected.

Resources:

UNICEF: <https://www.unicef.org/child-rights-convention>

Child Rights International Network:
<https://www.crin.org/en/home>

Springfield's Rights Respecting School Steering Group Parent Brochure

Introduction

As children who attend Springfield's Rights Respecting School Steering Group, we believe that all children have the right to be treated with respect and dignity. That's why we want to share with you some information about the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) and what it means for us.

What is the UNCRC?

The UNCRC is a special agreement that says all children have rights. It was made by the United Nations to make sure that every child in the world is treated fairly and has the things they need to grow up healthy and happy.

There are 54 articles in the UNCRC.

What are the rights of children under the UNCRC?

The UNCRC lists lots of different rights that every child has. Here are some of the most important ones:

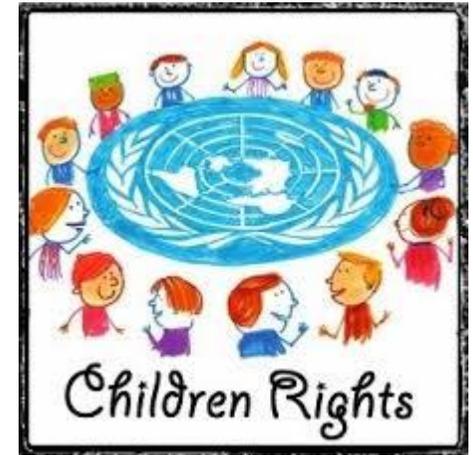

The right to be safe and healthy.

The right to go to school and learn.

The right to play and have fun.

The right to express their opinions and be heard.

The right to be treated fairly, no matter who they are.

Why are children's rights important?

Children's rights are important because they help us to grow up to be happy and healthy adults. When adults respect our rights, they help us to feel valued and important. They also help us to learn and grow, and to feel safe and secure.

